

AOTF

THE AMERICAN
OCCUPATIONAL THERAPY
FOUNDATION

ANNUAL REPORT 2017

Building Evidence to Improve Practice & Health™

Dear Friends and Partners,

Thank you for your continuing support of the Foundation. We rely on our partnership with you to accomplish the mission of the Foundation and to move the occupational therapy profession forward. I feel privileged to serve as the new Chair of the AOTF Board of Trustees and look forward to collaborating with fellow Board members and our community to promote impactful research. I am enthusiastic about the strategic objectives set forth in our three-year Strategic Plan and will strive to ensure it is a living document that propels the Foundation forward. We remain dedicated to increasing the research workforce in occupational therapy, and to supporting advances of knowledge in areas of critical need to the OT profession. We also plan to continue our efforts of disseminating and translating research-based knowledge for the benefit of OT practitioners and to the people who do or could benefit from occupational therapy. We are committed to enhancing our engagements with members of our community and I look forward to getting to know many of you and to reconnecting with fellow supporters of the Foundation.

Two years ago, we introduced a new tagline for the Foundation, Building Evidence to Improve Practice & Health. For the last two years, the Foundation has represented this tagline with a building block theme. While research provides the building blocks we need to generate the evidence, it is the people that generate this research that are essential. This year we want to put a face on those research investigators, in particular mentors; they are critical to sustaining the OT research enterprise, building research capacity, and ensuring the development and potential thriving of new generations of researchers.

When I talk with new investigators, or more typically, listen to their stories related to becoming a scholar, I am often struck with how particular people at particular points in time have said or done something that made a difference. Experienced mentors frequently tell stories that reveal the transactional nature of mentorship; mentors express how much they have learned from mentees and how these engagements have fueled their understanding or commitments. Skilled mentorship matters. We look forward to recognizing and promoting productive mentorship relationships that capitalize on our cross-generational engagements and build our capacity.

We hope this Annual Report inspires you, as a valued partner and investor, to support the Foundation as it moves forward to “advance the science of occupational therapy” and ultimately “to support people’s full participation in meaningful life activities”.

Sincerely,

Mary C. Lawlor, ScD, OTR/L, FAOTA
Chair, AOTF Board of Trustees
Member, AOTF Academy of Research

Thank You!

AOTF thanks Wendy Coster, AOTF Chair for 2016 and 2017. Dr. Coster has been the guiding force behind AOTF programs for several years. Dr. Coster is now serving as Chair of the AOTF Scientific Advisory Council. And a huge thank you to Jan Polgar and Joseph Brey who also rotated off of the AOTF Board as of January 1, 2018.

MENTORS:

Master Builders of Occupational Therapy Research

Building Evidence to Improve Practice & Health. We chose this tagline to represent our role in the occupational therapy research enterprise. The Foundation and its donor partners support research that helps build the evidence needed to improve the practice of occupational therapy, making sure it is highly effective and provides the highest standard of care resulting in improved health and quality of life. At the end of the day, we invest in people, with a particular niche of young investigators with novel ideas that need development and proof-of-concept in order to compete for resources that will allow them to improve the OT profession. Of course, development of young researchers into independent investigators doesn't "just happen". Mentors play a critical role in this path to independence.

The definition for mentor is relatively simple: men-tor- noun: 1. an experienced and trusted adviser; 2. an experienced person in a company, college, or school who trains and counsels new employees or students. verb: 1. advise or train (someone, especially a younger colleague). The word itself was inspired by the character Mentor, an advisor to young Telemachus in Homer's Odyssey. Although the definition for mentor may be simple, a sampling of synonyms for "mentor" is much more broad, e.g. advisor, guide, teacher/educator, coach, and counselor. Furthermore, while most agree that mentorship is a process that always involves communication and is relationship-based, a precise definition is not found, with more than 50 definitions currently in use (1).

Using our "building" analogy, we would add "master builder" to the list of synonyms for mentor. The term master builder was used more in pre-modern times (as a precursor to architect or engineer) and a turn-of-the-century description eloquently stated:

A master builder is recognized as such, not only for his ability to rear a magnificent structure after plans prepared by the architect for his guidance, but because of his ability to comprehend those plans, and to skillfully weave together the crude materials which make up the strength, the harmony, the beauty, the stateliness of the edifice which grow in his hands from a made foundation to a magnificent habitation (2).

We believe this description equally fits for our treasured resource, research mentors. For mentors and their protégés, we have the utmost respect and will continue to recognize their role in helping us "advance the science of occupational therapy".

AOTF has long known the importance of mentors in the research enterprise. The Leadership Mentoring Program invested in the power of the mentor-mentee relationship. Our Habits II and III conferences asked attendees to bring protégés. Our Intervention Research Grant program requires applicants to have mentors to guide them in their research and our Nedra Gillette Endowed Research Fellowship applicants also must have a mentor. Our Academy of Research is currently working on a mentoring program with Pi Theta Epsilon. Some of the early mentees and protégés have gone on to receive grants from us and others, and then to mentor younger colleagues. We will continue to value our mentors in all that we do.

New AOTF Research Program: AOTF Planning Grant Collective

In 2017, the Foundation added a new program to its research portfolio called the “AOTF Planning Grant Collective”. We want to be more proactive in our approach to advancing the science of occupational therapy by identifying research areas we believe would benefit from more involvement of OT investigators. This then might translate into evidence to support a larger role for OT practitioners in these areas. Occupational therapists and research experts from other disciplines are invited to a two and a half day workshop to promote discussion, collaboration, and to establish research teams with projects that will be pursued following the workshop.

Twenty-six participants attended our inaugural meeting June 19-21, 2017 with the Collective topic, Understanding and Enhancing Community Function in Serious Mental Illness. This meeting was made possible by generous support from Bonita Kraft, OTR/L, an occupational therapist and clinical instructor residing in California who has practiced in mental health for more than 35 years. Participants included OT researchers, psychologists, social workers, health policy specialists, and others, representing mental health professionals from the U.S. and Canada. In addition, several funding agencies (NIMH, NCMRR, NIDILRR) were invited, both as a way to identify potential funding opportunities and as a way to educate the agencies about the focus of occupational therapy.

Three groups were formed and agreed to pursue the following projects:

- Group 1: Action Over Inertia; OT Consultation on ACT Teams; and Active Living.
- Group 2: Improvement of community living outcomes for persons with serious mental illness with the inclusion of OT assessment/intervention.
- Group 3: College students with serious mental illness (SMI).

The Foundation plans to convene one Collective workshop a year and plans are well underway to do another one in 2018 in the area of cancer survivorship. We believe this multidisciplinary team approach will result in much-needed new research in areas of great interest to the OT profession.

AOTF IRG Program Reaches Funding Milestone

As we enter the fifth year of our Intervention Research Grant (IRG) program, we have reached an important benchmark in our funding of occupational therapy research. With the five new IRG grants awarded in 2017, we have now supported a total of 20 IRG grants and have reached one million dollars in funding for the program. The Foundation's niche is support of early career investigators and development of preliminary proof-of-concept research data to support the advancement of novel research ideas. The IRG program is our flagship of this effort. And the investment is starting to pay off with publications, grant application submissions, and career advancement for our recipients.

A few years ago, we modified the original grant program to require an experienced research mentor be part of the applicant's research team. In today's highly competitive research enterprise, young investigators need to develop the skill set to conduct quality science and navigate the complicated scientific environment. Mentors not only provide the knowledge transfer to young investigators, but serve as an important role model for advancement and sustainability in a research career. This year, in addition to recognizing the IRG grant recipients, we also list the mentor for each award.

The IRG program would not be possible without the support of the American Occupational Therapy Association (AOTA) and the National Board for Certification in Occupational Therapy (NBCOT). And a big thank you to the hundreds of students at the 44 schools that supported the IRG program through the 2017 St. Catherine Challenge.

Dr. Lin is professor of occupational therapy at National Taiwan University and currently serves as Director of the General Affairs division of the College of Medicine at the University. Dr. Lin and his collaborators study whether, and to what extent, new rehabilitation interventions, such as robotic therapy, restore purposeful movement and the ability to do daily activities in patients who have suffered a stroke. To understand how improvement happens, Dr. Lin studies the changes that occur in the brain while the person is engaged in those interventions or how the brain has changed as a result of those interventions. Then, to ensure that the patient and others can have confidence in the progress reported to them, Dr. Lin studies the reliability and responsiveness of tests that are used to measure improvement in voluntary movement and basic and extended activities of daily living in persons who have had a stroke.

AOTF's Events at the 2017 AOTA Annual

The 2017 AOTF Breakfast with a Scholar featured Phil Hansen, an artist whose world was turned upside down by a repetitive stress injury. As Phil Embraced the Shake, he transformed his limitations into opportunities. Over 550 people watched as Phil demonstrated his art style and answered questions. The State of the Science Symposium summarized current knowledge and evidence on resilience. Mark Salzer, PhD, Janet Falk-Kessler, EdD, OTR, FAOTA, Valerie Malhomes, PhD, and Kristie Patten Koenig, PhD, OTR/L, FAOTA presented and answered questions on occupational therapy's role in helping to adapt to adversity.

St. Catherine Challenge: A Most Successful Year

2017 saw the most schools participating in the history of the St. Catherine Challenge and raising the most money. Forty-four schools raised over $43,000 for research in occupational therapy by supporting the AOTF Intervention Research Grant by 44 schools program. All top schools earned prizes of tickets to AOTF events at the AOTA Annual Conference.

The student-led fundraiser continues to expand with new schools participating in the 2018 St. Catherine Challenge.

Thank you to all the 2017 participating schools who took on the Challenge and supported the future of occupational therapy.

Why Give?

In occupational therapy, we know that the path to meaningful, independent lives for all people is an arduous but rewarding journey. Each of us plays a part in advancing the research, education, and practice of occupational therapy. To ensure that occupational therapy continues to evolve, discover, and improve, all of us need to support the evidence-based science that informs our practice and is central to delivering quality care.

As we begin the second century of occupational therapy, there is great potential to address the rising challenges facing a diverse population, but we can only achieve success with a community of support. The investment necessary to generate new opportunities is made possible solely through the generosity of our philanthropic donors, whose dedication to the future enables us to advance the science of occupational therapy by building the evidence to improve practice and health.

{Mentors} invited me to think bigger than I could possibly imagine.

—Winifred Wiese Dunn, PhD, OTR, FAOTA

THERE IS A GIFT THAT'S RIGHT FOR EVERYONE.

Growth at the Wilma L. West Library

The Wilma L. West Library and Archives continues to increase its collection with additions of books and journals. Library staff members add entries weekly to OT SEARCH, the online public access catalog; it has grown to over 48,000 items including journal articles from over 50 different publications.

In celebration of the Centennial, the Archives provided dozens of images for the AOTA Annual Conference opening ceremonies, the AOTA website, and to individual scholars, researchers, and historians.

OTJR: Occupation, Participation and Health, AOTF's peer-reviewed research journal, continues to publish on a quarterly basis and in October 2017, published a special issue on Occupational Therapy and Public Health with guest editors Nancy Baker, ScD, MPH, OTR/L, FAOTA, University of Pittsburgh and Julie Bass, PhD, OTR/L, FAOTA, St. Catherine University. In addition, OTJR increased its impact factor to .795 which represents an increase of 51.72% from 2015. This steady growth represents the hard work and meaningful contributions that the Editor-in-chief Sherrilene Classen, PhD, MPH, OTR/L, FAOTA, FGSA, University of Florida, and nine associate editors have made over the last few years.

Pi Theta Epsilon: Ensuring Future OT Success

Pi Theta Epsilon, the occupational therapy honor society, continues to advance its mission to support occupational therapy by promoting research, leadership, and scholarly activities. One hundred and one schools now have active chapters, with Florida Gulf Coast University, Mary Baldwin University, Rush University, University of Minnesota-Minneapolis, and MGH Institute of Health Professions most recently joining PTE.

The 2017 Mary J. Bridle First Research Award went to Elizabeth Torrez, OTD, OTR/L for her study "Defining Occupational Therapy Interventions for Children with Handwriting Difficulties". Omicron chapter of Boston University won the 2017 PTE President's Award for their series of interviews with Intervention Research Grant recipients. The interviews can be viewed on the PTE YouTube channel.

PTE members gathered for their Annual Business Meeting at the AOTA/NBCOT Student Conclave where PTE President Joseph Brey, OTD, OTR/L, stepped down and Pooja A. Patel, DrOT, OTR/L began her tenure as PTE President. Secretary Rebecca Grondin, MS, OTR/L, began her second term and Vice President Kimberly Clark, OTD, OTR/L, and Treasurer Sean Brim, MOT, will continue their leadership on the national board. Tracy Fleming Tracy, OT, MSCS, clinical research coordinator of the Tanner Foundation for Neurological Diseases, spoke on Navigating Your Career Path: Steps to Consider When Thinking About Your Involvement in Research. Seven PTE students displayed posters on their research for all Conclave attendees to view.

Mentors make you believe you can do it, when you are less sure. Mentors open doors to understanding and insight and they inspire. You will not go far, or anywhere worthwhile without mentors.

—Catherine Lysack, PhD, OT(C)

I think that the most important role [of mentors] has been one of "guided discovery" – providing an environment and guidance for me to learn and grow while still allowing me to develop an independent trajectory unique to me.
